They were discovered by eisoncarter by GTA Forums by connecting the PS2 controller to the parallel port of the PC and trying numerous high-speed combinations. Needless to say, this is not recommended for people to try at home, since it also requires special software to do this job. The missions through the source code of the game also reveal various hidden button codes for special tricks, but the combinations of buttons are up to the writing point. Perhaps we will discover the combinations in the future, but for now these cheats can only be triggered with cheating devices. Cheats include (but are not limited to): all cars with nitroso all cars with hydraulic infinite health ammunition endless oxygen never wanted anyone can be recruited to your band Spawn Hunter Dozer all street lights "strobe" street lights all cars turn into bike / country car / sports car / special vehicles 'mission select' code (known for being used in beta phases, possibly removed) The rest of the cheating codes and more were finally found 6 months after the release not through the brute force method, but interpreting the hash values created by different combinations of buttons, and then comparing the resulting hashes with the hashes for the cheating codes programmed in the game. Due to the way the chess codes of the game are programmed (32-bit), it was discovered that each cheater had a huge number of different key combinations that triggered it. So far the list of codes ending with L1 has been extracted, and the estimated number of work combinations is over 200,000. News News
