It's two or three words that make up a main verb. A phrasal verb is just a verb, not anything else in the sentence. Usually, the words that make up a phrasal verb are a verb and a preposition, but this is not always the case. Sometimes, the first word of a phrasal verb is not a verb at all, but when coupled with the preposition, the whole sentence becomes a verb. For example, the phrasal verb "clam up" consists of a noun (clam) and a preposition (up). When you combine them, they become a single verb meaning "to become silent or refuse to speak". A phrasal verb is different from a verbal phrase. A verb phrase, sometimes called a predicate, is made up of a main verb along with all the complements, objects or adverbic phrases that follow it. So how do you know when you're dealing with a phrase book and not just a verb and a preposition? You have to read the whole sentence. If the two words can be understood literally, it is a verb and a preposition. If they are to be taken together with a meaning that has little or nothing to do with the meaning of the verb alone, then it is a phrasal verb. We use "exit" to explain how to recognize phrasal verbs. I left the room for a moment. Here, the words in the phrase "exit" literally mean "exit" and "exit". This is a verb (and 2) and a preposition (out). I went out with him a couple of times. Here, the phrase "exit" is a phrasal verb meaning "went the time romantically." that you've gone somewhere. Phrasal verbs may seem complex at first, but reading a number of examples can help define this part of the speech. Use verb worksheets to help you understand other types of verbs such as transitive verbs and auxiliary verbs.
