The slightest hesitation leads to a shameful end. "Militarum Tempest, aka Tempestus Scion Regimental Lord, is one of the strictest rules in the entire empire, as her army was made up of the elite army Astra, also known as the Lord Lord of the Tempestus Scion Regiments. The military serves as special units. While the Ordo Tempestus is technically a faction under the control of an Administrative Adept, it generally has much more autonomy than the Imperial Guard regiments. The ranks of the Ordo Tempestus are mainly composed of commission members and special units known in Tempestus Scion or Low Gothic as "storm squads", but often include specialist groups that are often not included in Imperial records. On every battlefield in the Galaxy, the men of men work alongside the unsavory might of the Astra Militarum, and their significant training only completes the workforce of the Imperial Guard. If the Ordo offers a strong disciplinary system that includes the Astra Militarum, the commissioners are the operational leaders. The Officio Prefect commands and similarly commands Tempestus Scion and Empire Guards regiments and empowers the armed forces on behalf of the Emperor. All panelists, tightly controlled by the structure of the Imperial War Machine, are a rare privilege, able to reliably improvise new commands on the battlefield. But only the largest of them, the so-called Lord Commissioners, are truly independent. They are warriors with great personal charisma and often inspire men by standing on top rather
