Online and wireless battles in the games remain exactly the same as before. While between Pokémon Ultra Sun and Ultra Moon games you can do and use anything, when you connect with Pokémon Sun & Moon players, there are several restrictions. Essentially, you can't use any of the new Pokémon, forms, movements and skills in the battle against these players. The game will inform you as you select your computer if it can be used or not. The Battle Spot changes this a little. In Free Battle, Pokémon Sun & Moon and Pokémon Ultra Sun & Ultra Moon run different pairing schemes to never meet. In Rating Battle, they also run different schemes, with the Pokémon Ultra Sun and Ultra Moon scheme changing a bit of the Pokémon Sun & Moon standard. When you're going to fight a player with Sun & Moon, they'll tell you to set the rules. If your team doesn't meet, it will give you opportunities to remove items and even tell you what's wrong. Pokémon Battle Revolution is the first game of Pokémon for the Nintendo Wii console. In fact, it's the first Wii game that uses Nintendo's Wi-Fi connection. Also, the connection between Nintendo DS and Wii is premiered in this game. Unlike the previous Pokémon console games by Genius Sonority (Pokémon Coliseum and Pokémon XD), Pokémon Battle Revolution is once again a combat simulator in which the fighting is discussed in different modes with lent passes or in the main game. Let the transferred Pokémon Revolution can be regarded as the spiritual successor of Pokémon Stage 2. Unlike Pokémon Stadium, Pokémon Stadium 2, Pokémon Coliseum and Pokémon XD: The Dark Storm, the game's graphics have been improved, but in some attacks (such as eruption) the image is shaken. Many Pokémon of the 1 to 3 have been re-modelled for the game and of course the Pokémon from the 4th generation can also be admired on the big TV screen in 3D. The scene of the entire game is the large island Poketopia. Single Combat Modes The game offers a total of 10 Colosseums, in which each is fought with different rules. Each of them has more or less strong coaches and a Colosseum leader. At the beginning of the Colosseum Battle mode, you can choose from two Colosseums. As soon as all opposing coaches and leaders of the Coliseums have been defeated, the remaining Colosseums are gradually unlocked. After each round you win, there is a certain number of Poké©coupons, which can be exchanged for accessories as well as for precious and rare items, which can then be exchanged via wireless connection. You can fight with your Poké©mon from one of the games mentioned above, or you can take a so-called loan pass, in which you can use your Poké©mon with a six loan Pokémon. Colosseums Information about each Colosseum and its rules can be found in the following articles: How to use Pokémon Colosseum and Pokémon XD: The Dark Storm in Pokémon Battle Revolution, you can also exchange your Pokémon Coupons for prizes, which you can then transfer to the Nintendo DS via secret events. It is to be noted that these prizes are not all available from the beginning, but during the course of the game must be unlocked gradually. Furthermore, you also have the choice to buy accessories for the toy figure from the winning points.
