T Time with Elephants Three interesting things about elephant begin with the letter T – trunk, tusk and teeth. An elephant's trunk has over forty thousand muscles and tendons. The trunk is a combination of the nose and the upper lip. An elephant uses its trunk for picking up things. It also uses its trunk for smelling. An elephant has two tusks. The tusks are made of ivory. The tusks grow from the elephant's upper jaw. An elephant has these two "teeth" instead of incisor teeth. The tusks grow throughout an elephant's life. An elephant uses its tusks to drill for water and to dig up food. All African elephants have tusks. Only some Asian male elephants have tusks. Some female Asian elephants also have tusks, but they are very small and hidden inside their mouth. An elephant also has four other teeth. These teeth are molars. An elephant has one upper molar and one lower molar on each side of its mouth. Because an elephant eats a lot of plants, its molars get ground down. New molars move in to replace the old molars about every ten years. An elephant gets up to six sets of molars over its lifetime. Answer the following questions. 1. How many muscles and tendons are in an elephant's trunk? a. over 40,000 () b. over 400,000 () c. over 400,000 () d. over 40,000,000 () 2. What two things does an elephant use its trunk for? _____ 3.
