Biggest fears list

The Chapman University Survey of American Fears Wave 5 (2018) provides an in-depth examination into the fears of average Americans. In June of 2018, a random sample of 1,190 adults from across the United States were asked their level of fear about ninety-four different phenomena including crime, the government, the environment, disasters, personal anxieties, technology and many others. Top 10 Fears of 2018
Below is a list of the 10 fears for which the highest percentage of Americans reported being “Afraid,” or “Very Afraid.” Top Ten Fears of 2018
% Afraid or Very Afraid
1. Corrupt government officials 73.6
2. Pollution of oceans, rivers and lakes 61.6
3. Pollution of drinking water 60.7
4. Not having enough money for the future 57.5.

6. People I love dying 56.4
7. Air pollution 55.1
8. Extinction of plant and animal species 54.1
9. Global warming and climate change 53.2
10. High medical bills 52.9
Government Corruption
Tops the List Again
For the fourth year in a row the top fear of Americans is corrupt government officials. And as in the previous four years, the fear that our government is corrupt far exceeds all others we asked about. Nearly 3/4 of Americans said they are afraid or very afraid of corrupt governmental officials in 2018. By comparison, the next highest level of fear was more than 10 points lower at 61.6% (pollution of oceans, rivers and lakes).
Government corruption aside, our top ten list suggest that Americans are preoccupied by fears of three different types. Americans fear for the environment (#s 2, 3, 7, 8, 9), fear bad things happening to loved ones (#s 4 and 10), High levels of fear of loved one’s becoming ill (#5) and high medical bills (#10) also indicate that health care remains a primary concern of Americans.
Fear in the age of Trump
We now have two data collected about American fears since Trump’s election. The table below presents the top ten lists for 2016, 2017 and 2018. Since 2016, there are two striking changes in American fears. Top Ten Fears (2016-2018)
2016 2017 2018

Increasing Fear
About the Environment
A striking difference between 2016 and 2017-2018 has to do with the environment. Since Trump’s election, Americans’ are increasing fearful of pollution, global warming and other environmental disasters. Not a single environmental concern made the top 10 list in 2016. In 2017, four of the top ten fears were related to the environment (#s 3, 4, 8 and 10). By 2018, five of the top ten fears were environmental in nature (#s 2, 3, 7, 8 and 9).
Fear on the Rise
The extent to which Americans are afraid, in general, also appears to be on the rise. In 2016, the highest level of fear reported by our respondents was for corrupt government officials at 60.6%. From there fear dropped precipitously, with #2 on the list in 2016 (terrorist attack) down to forty-one percent and the rest of the 2016 top ten list all under forty percent. By 2017, the top fear (corrupt government officials) was up to 74.5% and five of the top ten fears were expressed by more than half of the population. By 2018 all the top ten fears were held by more than half of Americans. Put another way, by year, the top ten fears have ranged from: 2016: 35.5% to 60.6%
2017: 9% to 74.5%
2018: 9% to 73.6%

Wikipedia list article:
The English suffixes -phobia, -phobic, -phobe (from Greek φόβος, phobos, “fear”) occur in technical usage in psychiatry to construct words that describe irrational, abnormal, unwanted, persistent, or disabling fear as a mental disorder (e.g. agoraphobia), in chemistry to describe chemical aversions (e.g. hydrophobia), in biology to describe organisms that dislike certain conditions (e.g. acidophobia), and in medicine to describe hypersensitivity to a stimulus, usually sensory (e.g. photophobia). In common usage, they also form words that describe dislike or hatred of a particular thing or subject (e.g. homophobia). The suffix is antonymic to -phil. For more information on the psychiatric side, including how psychiatry groups phobias such as agoraphobia, social phobia, or simple phobia, see phobia. The following lists include words ending in -phobia, and include fears that have acquired names. In some cases, the naming of phobias has become a word game, of notable example being a 1998 humorous article published by BBC News.[1] In some cases, a word ending in -phobia may have an antonym with the suffix -phil-, e.g. Germanophobe/Germanophile. Many -phobia lists circulate on the Internet, with words collected from indiscriminate sources, often copying each other. Also, a number of psychiatric websites exist that at the first glance pour a huge number of phobias, but in fact use a standard text to fit any phobia and reuse it for all unusual phobias by merely changing the name. Sometimes it leads to bizarre results, such as suggestions to cure “prostitute phobia”. [2] Such practice is known as content spamming and is used to attract search engines. An article published in 1897 in American Journal of Psychology noted “the absurd tendency to give Greek names to objects feared (which, as Arndt says, would give us such terms as klopsophobia – fear of thieves, triakaidekaphobia – fear of the number 13...”).[3]
Psychological conditions
Specialists may prefer to avoid the suffix -phobia and use more descriptive terms such as personality disorders, anxiety disorders, and avoidant personality disorder. Terms should strictly have a Greek prefix although many are irregularly formed with Latin or even English prefixes. Many use inaccurate or imprecise prefixes, such as aerophobia (fear of air) for fear of flying. This list is in alphabetic order, you can help by adding missing items with reliable sources.

Jocular and fictional phobias
Aibhophobia – a humorous term for the fear of palindromes, which is a palindrome itself. The term is a piece of computer humor entered into the 1981 The Devil’s DP Dictionary [24]
Anatidaphobia – the fictional fear that one is being watched by a duck. The word comes from the name of the family Anatidae, and was used in Gary Larson’s The Far Side [25]
Anoraknophobia – a portmanteau of “anorak” and “arachnophobia”. It was used in the Wallace and Gromit comic book Anoraknophobia. Also the title of an album by Marillion.
Archibutyrphobia – fear of peanut butter sticking to the roof of the mouth, from Latin arachis “peanut” and butyrum “butter”.[26] The word is used by Charles M. Schulz in a 1982 installment of his Peanuts comic strip,[27] and by Peter O’Donnell in his 1985 Modesty Blaise adventure novel Dead Man’s Handle.
Hippopotomonstrosesquepialophobia – fear of long words,[28] from the root word sesquipedalophobia combined with monstrum and hippopotamus. This was mentioned on the first episode of Brainiac Series Five as a Tickle’s Teaser.
Keanuphobia – fear of Keanu Reeves, portrayed in the Dean Koontz book, False Memory, where a woman has an irrational fear of Reeves and has to see her psychiatrist, Mark Ahirman, each week, unaware that she only has the fear in the first place because Ahirman implanted it via hypnotic suggestion to amuse himself. He calls her “Keanuphobe” in his head.
Nihilophobia – fear of nothing, nothingness, from Latin nihil and “nothing, none”, as described by the Doctor in the Star Trek: Voyager episode “Night”. Voyager’s morale officer and chef Neelix suffers from this condition, having panic attacks while the ship was traversing a dark expanse of space known as the Void. It is also the title of a 2008 album by Neuronium.
Robophobia – irrational fear of robots and/or androids, also known as “Grimwade’s Syndrome”. It was first used in “The Robots of Death”.[29] the fifth serial of the 14th season of the British science fiction television series Doctor Who.
Semaphobia – fear of average web developers to use Semantic Web technologies.[30]
Venustraphobia – fear of beautiful women, according to a 1998 humorous article published by BBC News.[1]
Venustraphobia is also the title of a 2006 album by Casbah Club. See also List of paraphilias
