A lot of us go around looking for the perfect person. Yet the person who completes you most likely is not almost perfect as you might hope. Use your pessimism to set realistic expectations about the people you meet or pursue a relationship with. We live our lives trying to fulfill our expectations, both ours and others. Sometimes they can... Read more

The School of Life explains how pessimism can temper our expectations of love: With pessimism comes forgiveness for the inevitably long range of defects we will discover in them - and, of course, they will discover in us. An optimistic search for the perfect person commits us, in the end, to throw away everyone we are always likely to meet. Yet, in truth, the person who is really best suited to us is not the person who shares all our tastes, but the person who negotiates differences of taste intelligently and wisely. Compatibility is a love success. That can't be her precondition. To be able to love properly, we must attend a funeral first. We have to bury many of our hopes deep in the earth... It will free us to return to the world and have adequate human relationships that we can endure and flourish. Although romantic comedies will make you think there's a perfect person with perfect timing (and all your problems will disappear like a roll of credits), this is real life. Tempering your expectations just a little does not necessarily mean that you settle for a loveless relationship. Keep your standards high and don't go out with anyone you don't want, but keep in mind that there isn't a perfect person. Stop looking for one and you might find love. How to save love with Pessimism | The school of lifePhotography by Guian Bolisay. Dating is like working out, and just as you can work more efficiently, you can get better at dating. When you start doing it, you can feel really exciting: I'm doing something new! It's funny! I'm changing things! Look at me! But then it often begins to feel like a lot of work: Seriously, Tuesday night, do I expect to go into the world? And put your clothes on? And don't watch TV? But then, after time passes, meetings can start to feel good. As the exercise, it takes practice à and when it is put in a little time, it is better equipped for everything that comes. I asked six relationship experts for practical advice on becoming a more experienced, smarter, safer dater à even if trust isn't necessarily the key. One study found that insecure people have a better chance of landing on a date, because they are more careful about what the other person might want at the moment. But in the end, trust helps: After a while, insecurity could lead to other problems in a relationship. No matter if you to be confident, insecure, or fall somewhere in the middle of the spectrum, here are 13 tips to help you become a dater.1. Think of Dating as a Social ClubInstead of watching a first date like drag drag yourself in the world to meet some stupid stranger, think it as a social club, suggests clinical hypnotherapist, author and educator Rachel Astarte. "We can be more experienced when we take the pressure out," says Bustle. "Go on dates as if you meet new and interesting people. Forget the goal of finding 'The One'. Watch dating as a way to connect to related people," says Astarte, who offers transformative coaching for individuals and couples in Healing Arts New York. "Even if a romantic relationship is not in the cards, you can find a pretty cool friend. "2. Be a sparkling conversationalist Don't be watching and rolling your eyes on your date. "Fully speaking," coach Melinda Carver report tells Bustle. "This means speaking for a minute or two, and then giving the other person the opportunity to respond." And don't dominate the conversation. "Don't monopolize conversations," he says. "Simple courtesies go a lot to shine around others. "3. Stay out of your head A cardinal rule of dating: "Do not overdo the texts," Stefanie Safran, "Introductionist" of Chicago and founder of Stef and the city, says Bustle. "There is a reason why we need to talk and spend time with people in person: We can meet them," he says. "Don't spend too much time 'writing' a relationship - focus on having actually one." Do not put a great effort in every message; beat some back and forth, and then "make real plans or move to someone who will do it," Safran says.4. It is better to find some clarity around your desires before falling headfirst into the dating pool, Tina Tessina, psychotherapist and author of Love Styles: How to celebrate your differences, says Bustle. "You know what you want," he says. "If you want a relationship, don't have sex and nothing more." In other words, don't settle for the first person who asks you out. Tessina, AKA Dr. Romance, encourages the process of "shopping around": "Don't stay focused on a person until you have given you a choice," he says.5. Getting your affirmation on "Personal development is the key to success in dating — and in life." Daniel Amis trainer report tells Bustle. "Microphone mastery is very important," he says. "Read positive statements - and you think you'll draw the right person." Once you choose your mantr(s) and get your head to the right, "to assume that it is a number game," the author of Unbreakable Love: Methods tried to develop a stronger, more satisfaction relationship in just 30 days tips. "You must kiss some frog before you meet your prince or princess. "6. Be good with bad datesSheet music: Being "can handle bad dates" is vital, says Safran, "as there will probably be more bad than good ones." How to play the gamebe prepared to meet some duds. "Since we can date so many people these days, more people who make big 'horrible date stories' will come will come Don't be discouraged, focus on the ultimate goal, "says.7. Keep It Lightà »Chrease", the coach of relationships and psychic medium Cindi Sansone-Braff, author of Why Good People Canà €™™ T Leave Bad Relationships, says to Bustle. À «Ride a lot. Smile and take off. Don't look at each date as if it were a run, or go ahead with the mentality that your whole life depended on the outcome of that date.à € »Instead, it just shows up and having fun and try to keep expectations completely from €™™ Equation.8. Be honest »say the truth», it advises tessel. This includes all fronts, adds Safran: "Be honest on your weight or height," she says. That being said, you don't have to reveal every detail on you as soon as you greet your guide, Tessina says. "Don't lie, but also don't share too soon," she says. À «You don't have to tell your appointment all your story, or talk about other appointments if you don't have an agreement on the exclusivity .à €™™ In doubt, though, say the truth: À «If you want to leave with the right foot, be Onestià, says Safran.9. Be kindecco an intelligent one that I didn't hear: check your selfishness at the door. "He thinks about another person and tries to make her feel at ease," says Sansone-Braff. "Go to every appointment with a positive attitude and with the hope of having fun," she says. À «If it turns out to be a total disaster, you can laugh later, knowing that you can't invent this stuff" .10. Positive rules À »One of the most important things from which to leave is a good attitude," says Carver. À «If you are sad, angry, embittered or jealous, these attitudes will hinder you and sabot you." This should be obvious, but if you apply to you: "People don't want to stay around bad and bellicose people," says . À «Change your attitude. Change your energy and help you attract others" .11. Taking a Respiroon Cà €™™ reason to go out with someone all day every day. "Take a break when you need it," says Safran. À «The best appointments, and the most successful ones with which I work, are people who are honest when they are not in the right mentality due to job problems, personal problems or simply need to recharge." If today it's not yours Day, don't run out of the door to meet someone who could be a great game for you next week, when you're back in the groove. À € œ! if you feel good about yourself, it is more likely to present you better and meet the right partners for you, "says Safran.12. Smile, "smile and get close when you go out," says Carver. À «A smile says you are a positive and open person. It is a signal for others who are friendly. "Even if you are out with friends, this could help someone want to talk to you, he says. "When you sit down with a pout or pout on the face, this turns off those that interest you» .13. Be ok with the refusal a fact: Who you meet is not going to die for a second date. "Let yourself be rejected", says Safran. "Most of the people you meet are not To be the righteous, so it's okay with being rejected. "The same is true for you: It's quite well, and actually preferable, refuse someone à €™™ kindly, of course. "Dust you off and get back in the Game when this happens," he says. Images: Fotolia; Wiflegif (13) Getty Images Rudeness, a messy appearance, late: certain first appointment shifts are obvious. But if you've ever been ghost after number one, or simply thought that one Evening went well when it wasn't happened, it may have been something that would not be expected Scent, to ask real women de Their largest shifts. Take these seven crimes and you could say Sayonara before the time happily ends. Avoid them, and you are a closer step to nail the first appointment. Use of the bad grammarà € œ when I was in the dense of online meetings, my number one shift was bad grammar. It didn't matter if it was Ryan Gosling-Level Hot, the moment when I saw a one, there, I'm 'or your own, you're a mix-up, it was done. "à € à €™™ Lauren R., 32, New York, NysMelling Badà € œ when you lean to that embrace of the first meeting, I immediately realize if a boy smells good or not. Bo is a defined outflow, as well as It's bad breath! The memories of perfume are strong, so you don't really want to ruin everything. A spray or two of a beautiful cologne can take a long way to make a positive and lasting impression.à € à € œShleigh M., 29, New York, Nyneed A fragrance update? We recommend Boss The Scent, who has notes of ginger, Maninka fruit and leather. Being polar opposites - I'm gone on a first appointment years ago during a presidential electoral season. All the day it was fine, but then we started talking about our dream work. He said his dream job would be to work in the candidate's administration that I did not claim, and it turned off immediately! one thing is to dare someone with different political opinions, but if they want to devote their working life to those opinions ... this is a bargain breaker. à € œelmy M., 29, Amsterdam, Netherlands Have a dirty car "I don't care what kind of car you have, but if it is full of garbage, crumbs or strange smells, it is totally a take-off. It must not be speck and span, but if you don't care about your car, I assume you will not take care of your living space too.à € à € œMily S., 28, Allentown, Paasking for your Ig handle instead of your numberà € œ I was in a bar and rather than asking for my number, a boy asked for mine I have a boy, so I wouldn't be engaged anyway, but I asked him, "my Instagram handle?" And he said: À It's so that you do these days. So we can check and talk to DM. DM. It also helps to see you in my feed so you don't forget to reach out.à I was amazed that just having a conversation and getting someone's number wouldn't be enough to push them to reach out. I thought it was weird. I wouldn't give someone my Instagram handle so they can look at my feed and determine if my life is interesting enough for them to slide into my DMs.â Madeline H., 29, New York, NYTalking $$Guys talking about money. Even though I'm not bragging, it's not an attractive topic to bring up a first date. à Sydney G., 25, Boston, MAHaving food in your teeth For some reason, the deadly duo of food in your teeth and bad breath has always been a major comeback for me. I still have PTSD from a high school prom that stands out when my crush had clearly tasted pre-smooch party snacks. Remember those honey mustard bites?
