More information about Partnership Gingivitis is an inflammation of the gums, usually caused by a bacterial infection. If not treated, it may become a more serious infection known as periodontitis. Gingivitis e are the main causes of tooth loss in adults, according to the American Dental Association. Gingivitis is usually caused by excessive growth of teeth in addition to improper dental hygiene, there may be many contributing factors, such as: there are some types of gum infections from gums that are not linked to excessive plate growth. These include: some viral or fungal infections, like the trushan affected the tooth or tooth or tooth that do not fully occur (if that happens, the rubber bed above the tooth can trap debris and cause gums) your gums actually attach to the teeth at a point lower than the edges of the gum we se e. This forms a small space called solcus. Food and plaque can be trapped in this space and cause a gum infection or a gum infection. Plaque is a thin film of bacteria. It constantly forms on the surface of the teeth. Poiche. © the plate advances, hardens and becomes a tartar. It is possible to develop a gum infection when the plate extends below the rubber line. If left untouched, gum can separate gums from teeth. This can cause: soft tissue and bone lesions supporting the teeth the tooth to become relaxed and detached tooth loss, if the infection progresses friendly people are not aware that they have a gum disease. You can have gingivitis without symptoms. However, the following may be symptoms of gum disease: gums that are red, tender or swollen gums that bleed when brushing or flossing the teeth that have moved away from your tooth tooth tooth the change of teeth in how the teeth fit together when you bite (malocclusion) pus between the teeth and gumspain when the chewing-sensitive teeth prosthetic that are no longer photostatic that have not gone away After brushing your teeth it is important to contact a dentist if you think you may have a gum disease because © can still be reversed in the early stages. Contact a dentist if you have symptoms Gingival disease. The first signs are usually gums that are red, swollen and bleeding easily. During a dental examination, your gums will be probed with a small sovereign. This survey is a way to check inflammation. Measure your pockets around your own A typical depth is from 1 to 3 millimeters. Your dentist may also order X-rays to check for bone loss. Talk to your dentist about risk factors for gum disease, as well as your symptoms. This can help diagnose gingivitis. If there is gingivitis, you can refer to a periodontist. A periodontist is a dentist specializing in treating gum diseases. Good oral hygiene should be practised for the treatment of gingivitis. You should also cut down on any smoking if you smoke and manage diabetes if you live with this condition. Quitting smoking can be difficult, but a doctor can help you build a cessation plan that works for you. Other treatments include:deep cleaning of your teeth medications tantic teeth cleaning surgeryThere are several techniques that can be used to clean your teeth thoroughly without surgery. All remove plaque and tartar to prevent tire irritation:Scale. Scaling the teeth removes the tartar from above and below the rubber line. Plain of roots. This removes rough stains and removes plaques and tartar from the root surface. Laser. This treatment can remove tartar with less pain and bleeding than scaling and root planing. MedicatisA number of medications can be used to treat gum disease:Antiseptic mouthwash containing clorexidine can be used to disinfect the mouth. Time-release antiseptic chips containing clorexidine can be inserted into pockets after sowing the roots. Antibiotic microspheres made with minocycline can be inserted into pockets after scaling and flattening. Oral antibiotics can be used to treat persistent areas of inflammation of the gums. Doxyclyne, an antibiotic, can help enzymes not cause damage to teeth. Surgery If the gingivitis is serious, especially if it has caused any gum or loss of bone tissue, you may need surgery. The types of rubber surgery, performed by a periodontist to, include:flap surgery. The flap operation is a procedure in which gums are lifted back while plates and tartar are removed from the deepest pockets. The gums are then sutured in position to adapt comfortably the tooth, bone and tissue grafts. Graphic can be used when teeth and jaw are too damaged to heal. The rubber graft surgery uses tissue from the roof of the mouth to cover the root of the exposed teeth. This helps to prevent further gums and bone loss. For a bone graft, the doctor will start with a procedure similar to a lembo surgery, Mother { put in a bone graft to encourage your body to regenerate any elongated jawbone. Some people with gums may have excess rubber tissue. If so, a periodontist can remodel the gum and bone tissue to show more teeth. This may also be necessary before some pr cosmetic or repair procedures on your teeth. A correct and consistent oral hygiene can prevent gum disease. This includes:visiting the dentist to regularly brush teeth twice a day with toothpaste refraining from teeth every day Eating a balanced diet is also important to achieve and maintain dental health.
