Road tax is also known as Vehicle Excise Duty, vehicle tax or car tax. Many blue badge holders are also eligible for exemption from paying road tax. People who don't have a blue badge might also be able to get a road tax exemption. You'll automatically get a refund for any full remaining months of road tax when you apply for exemption. Find out more about getting free vehicle tax if you're a disabled driver on GOV.UK. Disabled parking place close to your home If you're a blue badge holder, you can ask for a disabled parking place to be created near to your home. You'll need to contact the roads department in your local council for an assessment. The disabled parking place for blue badge users does not belong to you, other badge holders can park there when displaying their blue badge. You might be able to get a disabled space outside your own home that only you can use. The following will need to apply to your situation: you have a valid disabled person's badge - blue badge it is not possible to create a driveway or other hard parking surface near or within your property you have a permanent medical condition which affects mobility you're the driver of a private vehicle or you're assisted by a carer who is the driver of a private vehicle, and the carer lives at the address stated you have to keep the vehicle at the address stated in the application form you have difficulty in getting a parking space on the public road. You should contact your local council to find out if you can get a dedicated disabled parking space as there might be different local rules. Wheel clamping If your vehicle is displaying a valid blue badge, it must not be wheel clamped on public land. Wheel clamping on private land is illegal in Scotland for all vehicles, not just vehicles displaying valid blue badges. Tolls at road bridges and tunnels There are no tolls in Scotland. But there are still tolls at some bridges and tunnels in other parts of the UK. If you have a valid blue badge, you might not have to pay tolls at certain road bridges and tunnels.
