Not everyone you practice194; 160; Reiki wants to use their training as a means to earn a living. However, serving as a healer can be a very satisfying career. As a Reiki professional, you can be proud of your work and make a difference in the quality of life of your customers. If you are thinking of creating a Reiki practice, consider the following tips before you start. There are three levels of basic training in Usui Reiki. You only need to be certified in the first level of training to offer Reiki treatments to clients. You will need to be certified at all levels to teach lessons and give Reiki attunement to students. It is better not to jump on your feet before starting a Reiki practice until you have a clear understanding of your relationship with the functioning of Reiki. Begin to experience Reiki on a personal level through self-treatment and dealing with family and friends. Experience all the inner mechanisms of this sweet and complex healing art takes time. Reiki gradually erases blocks and imbalances. Let Reiki help you balance your life before accepting the task of helping others. You have the certificate of paper proving that you have completed your Reiki training and are now qualified as a Reiki doctor. Congratulations! Unfortunately, this piece of paper might be meaningless when it comes to legally offering professional services in your area. Some United States require a license to practice natural health therapies. And because Reiki is an art of spiritual healing, in some states you may be required to become certified as an ordained minister. Calling your local town hall is a good way to start your fact-finding mission; Ask to speak to someone who can give you information about business licenses. Some municipalities also have this information on websites, but it may not be easy to find. Consider obtaining an insurance on responsibility for your protection against possible legal causes. You may also wish to have customers sign a stating that he was informed that Reiki does not replace medical care. Here is an example of editable release: Energy Work Allow and Release StatementI undersigned, understanding that Reiki's session date provides a natural practical method of energy balancing for pain management, stress reduction and relaxation. I understand very clearly that these treatments are not intended as substitutes for medical or psychological care; I understand that Reiki practitioners do not diagnose pathologies, do not prescribe drugs and do not interfere with the treatment of a qualified medical professional. I recommend looking for an authorized health care professional for any physical or psychological disorder I have.I know that the operator will put my hands on me during Reiki's session.----- Customer name (sign) Reiki sessions are offered in hospitals, nursing homes, pain care clinics, spas and home businesses. The advantage of working in a hospital, clinic, spa, or elsewhere is that appointments and insurance requests are usually treated for you. Most health insurances do not refund Reiki treatments, but some do. Medicare sometimes pays for Reiki treatments if the sessions are prescribed for pain management. Practice from an office at home is a dream that comes true for many practitioners, but this convenience comes with problems to consider. Do you have a room or area inside your house, separated from your normal accommodation, which could be dedicated to healing? The residential area where you live allows home-based businesses? And, there is also the question of security to invite strangers into your personal life space to consider. We recommend investing in a sturdy massage table for your practice in has nolf you propose to travel to make house calls or d o treatments in hotel rooms, hotel rooms, You will need a table massage 160; Here is a checklist of equipment and supplies for your Reiki practice: Massage Table accessories (rest face, bolster, transport box, etc.)Spinning chair with clean Fremerly rollers linensBlanketsTifsussused Word of mouth water is a good way to start working as a Reiki practitioner. Let your friends and family know you're open to business. Print the business cards and distribute them freely at the local bookshelves of libraries, community colleges, natural food markets, etc. Offer introductory workshops and Reiki actions to educate your community on Reiki. In the modern era a, the word mouth also means having a presence on social media. Setting up a Facebook page for your practice is free and it only takes a few minutes. Ideally, you will have your website that lists your location and contact information, but if this is out of reach, a Facebook page is a good start to draw new customers. Facebook also has tools that allow small businesses to reach a targeted audience (costs vary). Search what other Reiki doctors are loading into your area for their services. You want to be competitive, but don't belittle yourself. Perform a cost-benefit analysis and know-how 160; how much is needed to get 128; Whether it is for an hour or for a patient or for treatment-128; To cover your expenses and have some money left over. If you are willing to treat customers outside your home, it is likely that you will pay a fixed fee for a rental space or share a percentage of your session rights with your business guest. Keep good records of the money you're making. Working as an independent contractor means being informed of income tax and self-employment obligations.
