The speech has been famously portrayed by Laurence Olivier to raise British spirits during the Second World War, and by Kenneth Branagh in the 1989 film Henry V; it made famous the phrase "band of brothers".[1] The play was written around 1600, and several later writers have used parts of it in their own texts. Cultural influence Use and quotation During the Napoleonic Wars, just prior to the Battle of the Nile, Horatio Nelson, 1st Viscount Nelson, then Rear Admiral the Blue, referred to his captains as his "band of brothers".[2] Charles Dickens' magazine Household Words (1850-1851) took its name from the speech.[3] During the First Barbary War, Lieutenant Stephen Decatur, Jr. proclaimed "the fewer men, the greater share of honor," before leading a raiding party to destroy the USS Philadelphia (1799).[4] During World War II, Laurence Olivier delivered the speech during a radio programme to boost British morale and Winston Churchill found him so inspiring that he asked Olivier to produce the Shakespeare play as a film. O that we now had here But one ten thousand of those men in England That do no work to-day! KING. ^ "Blackadder s01e01 Episode Script | SS". Bush, the eventual legal victor, joined arms and recited the speech during a break in preparation, to motivate themselves.[6] On the day of the result of the 2016 United Kingdom European Union membership referendum, as the vote to leave became clear, activist and MEP Daniel Hannan is reported to have delivered an edited version of the speech from a table, replacing the names Bedford, Exeter, Warwick and Talbot with other prominent Vote Leave activists.[7][8] Film, television, music and literature Parts of the speech appear in films such as The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance (1962),[9][10] Tombstone (1993),[11] Renaissance Man (1994),[12] Tea With Mussolini (1999),[13] This Is England (2006),[14] and Their Finest (2017).[15] It has also been used in television series such as Rough Riders (1997),[16][17] Buffy the Vampire Slayer,[18][19] The Black Adder,[20][21] Count Arthur Strong and Doctor Who.[22] The phrase "band of brothers" appears in the 1789 song "Hail, Columbia", written for the inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the United States.[2] During the American Civil War, "The Bonnie Blue Flag"—a 1861 Confederate marching song written by Harry McCarthy—began with the words "We are a band of brothers, and native to the soil".[23] Stephen Ambrose borrowed the phrase "Band of Brothers" for the title of his 1992 book on E Company of the 101st Airborne during World War II; it was later adapted into the 2001 miniseries Band of Brothers.
