To get the best answers, we went to the core of the sector - Compensation of the Corp. sector and options, two Chicago outfits that manage a lot of investor education options. And remember, we are open all night for the reader's questions, then releases a note to the options forum and include your full name. When, where and how we say, I have A call option on ZZ Stock for an exercise price of $100 and expiry date of January 2002. Can I exercise my option at any time before January 2002 by paying an amount of $100 per share? Is that the third Friday of the month? All equity options negotiated by U.S. exchange offer the buyer the right to exercise an option contract at any time before expiry. This type of exercise procedure is referred to as "American style". In the example, as a Call Purchaser you have the right to submit an exercise notice to your broker at any time before Saturday after the third Friday in January 2002. What is the procedure to exercise the option? Just inform the broker? When you want to exercise your call option on ZZZZ Stock, you need to take your shares before the expiration of the option by directing your broker to exercise the option. However, in order to ensure that an option is exercised in a particular day, you, the option holder, must direct your company to exercise before the company's cutting time to accept the operating instructions for that day. Several companies can have different cutting times to accept exercise instructions from customers and those cutting times can be different for different options. Be sure to ask your broker on specific deadlines. Supposing the market price of ZZZZZZ stock is higher than $100 on the expiry date, what happens to the option if not army or sell the option before the expiry date? Will it be automatically exercised or will I have the opportunity to exercise even after the expiry date? If you do not exercise or sell the option before the expiry date, there are a couple of possible scenarios. The first scenario is that the contract simply expires, which means that the owner of the option no longer has any right to exercise the option and the option no longer has any value. The second scenario depends on your brokerage company. Some companies that are deleting members of the OCC may have options contracts that are present or higher than a specific in-the-money threshold exercised automatically unless the enterprise is embodied against the contrary. Regardless, most companies require their customers to notify the company of their intentions to exercise even if an option is in money. A call option is considered in money if the operating price is lower than the current price of the underlying stock. If ZZZZ stock splits 2-per-1, what happens to the options below? Options contracts are typically regulated for equity distribution. A good reference manual to review possible equity contract adjustments for this scenario is chapter 3 of the features and risks of optionsavailable free of charge on www.optionscentral.com. In your example, after the division, your position would have been adapted to two contracts with an exercise price of $50. If the company issues securities monitoring for a portion of the business, I would have got the tracking stock along with the stock ZZZZ when whenExercise the option? Only if the monitoring has been distributed to ZZZZ shareholders. ZZZZ options existing at the time of distribution are likely to be adjusted on a pro-rata basis. Once again, we encourage you to check Chapter 3 of the Features and Risks of Standardized Options for more detailed information on adjustments that can be made to certain options contract terms to explain events such as mergers, stock splits and spin-outs. spinoffs.
