One day, my friend visited my house having previous year papers in his hand. He was returning from his tuition classes. He realized my condition and suggested me to study from previous year papers. I started with all my heart, and within two months I was having a satisfying experience, and I continued the same way. Today, I am really very thankful to my friend. # Words From Priya (Topper of 2014) Hello, guys, I am Priya. Practicing previous year papers proved to be a lifesaver for me. English - The Scoring Subject Since English is a language subject, therefore, it is easy to prepare and, hence, students end up caring less about this subject. But, this is a wrong approach if you want to score good percentage in board exam. Subjects like English and Hindi should be considered as the marks hoosting subjects. You can score in 80% and 90% without even breaking a sweat, but that does not mean you should avoid this subject. Instead, you should prepare it the best way you can. While practicing English, make sure you practice the grammar part well. Memorize the format of the writing section like letters, notice etc. In the writing section, half of the marks are for formatting, and try to keep your content meaningful. Focus more on quality than quantity. Mathematics - Not That Hard Maths is a subject that requires complete concentration and dedication, and maybe this is why student usually don't find it easy. The best way to practice maths is to keep your basics clear. Before you start practicing any chapter, try to keep the basic concepts of that chapter clear, then only you will be able to really master that chapter. Formulas of that particular chapter should be on your fingertips. You can note the important formulas and questions in a separate diary so that it becomes easier for you to revise them, whenever you want. Science - The Three parts Though there is only 1 NCERT book for all the three parts i.e Physics, Chemistry, and Biology, students usually go for the separate refresh for each part. It's good to practice from other refreshers, but make sure you complete your NCERT book, as most of the questions in board exam are asked from NCERT book. To score good marks in science, you will need to practice each and every part equally good. But if you find any part hard then you can skip it, but then you will need to prepare the other two parts very well. Social Studies - Not So Boring Most students find Social science boring subject, but they should know that it can be really scoring subject as it is mostly theory based subject. You can write long answers by simply memorizing small terms and points i.e small points can be elaborated to write big answers. You can make a separate notebook and write important terms and points in that notebook. This will help at the time of revision. Hindi - Source Of Percentage Hindi is, of course, the easiest of all subjects, and that is why students leave it for the last day. But they forget that Hindi can prove to be such a good source of percentage. Not that you should spend hours studying Hindi, but, at least, give it some time, so that you are well prepared to score maximum marks in this subject. Settings X A thorough study of NCERT books followed by sample papers and previous years solved papers is sufficient for your good preparation. However, in order to maximise your score, you may need guidance and tips to take care of certain things during the actual examination like using your time effectively, prioritizing questions to be done first, allotting time to different sections etc. This is where tuitions help.
