The actors make a lot of money to perform in the character for the camera, and the directors and crew members pour out an incredible talent in creating "film magic" that makes everything simple and fun. However, some of the most famous films in history had such challenging and frustrating productions that someone concerned that they would be flops for offices "or completely demolished before completion. Take a look at our list of fantastic successful movies that almost did not make it on the big screen. Wizard of Oz is an iconic classic, so it's hard to believe that the 1939 mgm brilliant show was almost never done. From the beginning, it took 17 screenplays and six directors to deal with the project. When they finally recovered, the shooting was a disaster. courtesy photo: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer / IMDb The original tin man, Buddy Ebsen, had to be replaced by Jack Haley because of an allergy to aluminum makeup. Dorothy's faithful canine companion, Toto, cursed, and the wicked witch of Western actress Margaret Hamilton was accidentally burned during the shooting. Despite the difficulties, the film has cashed over $2 million and remains a timeless classic. The 1982 adventure Drama Fitzcarrald had one of the most difficult productions in film history. The film was filmmaker Werner Herzog, the crazy story of the real rubber Baron Carlos Fermin Fitzcarrald. Turned to South America, one of the most famous scenes of the film involves dragging a giant steamer on a hill. courtesy photo: Werner Herzog FilmProduktion / IMDb Herzog has stubbornly rejected with miniature effects and insisted they shoot at the scene with a real 320-ton steamer. The scene was a disaster - there were numerous wounds and even dead. The actors suffered from dysentery, and two small air accidents led to further accidents. It is a miracle that the film has never been completed. Rapa-Nui was almost destined from the beginning. The historical drama of 1994 on the history of the island of Easter. Director Kevin Reynolds described the film's shooting as a nightmare. It was for a long time. The Disaster ArtistThe Room is one of the most famous films than very few people actually seen. The "drama" of 2003 written, directed and interpreted by Tommy Wiseau, was defined one of the worst films ever made. Even if the room is not available on any streaming service, we have this comedy of 2017, which tells the true story of how Wiseau and others have done this film. Christine Mastrantonio were on the edge of a mental collapse. Photo courtesy: 20th Century Fox / IMDb at one point, Merantonio screamed at Cameron, "We are not animals!" This was in response to the suggestion of the director that the actors should urinate in their mutes to save time between the preens. While the film was well received in a critical way and e $90 million, everyone was happy when it was over. Director Richard Stanley desperately wanted to embark on his dream project: an adaptation of the novel by H.G. Wells The Island of Dr. Moreau. Stanley was particularly excited when the acclaimed actor Marlon Brando signed to play the title role. But then, three days to film the 1996 thriller, Stanley was fired. Photo Courtesy: New Line Cinema/IMDb Actor Val Kilmer beat Stanley, and intense topics led manufacturers to fire him and hire John Frankenheimer as a substitute. However, it wasn't the end of the problem, like Kilmer and Brando didn't get along. (Someone thinks maybe the problem was Kilmer?) Francis Ford Coppola was determined to continue his leadership success after the Padrino. He decided to adapt Joseph Conrad Heart of Darkness's novel into an epic war film on the futility of the Vietnam conflict. This project became the drama of 1979 Apocalypse Now. Photo Courtesy: New Line Cinema/IMDb Aiming for Realism, Coppola filmed the film in the Philippines. The service lasted more than a year, and everyone suffered terrible storms and script rewriting. main actor Martin Sheen also suffered an heart attack. Coppola described the film: "We were in the jungle. We had too much money. We had too much equipment. And little by little, we've become crazy." Similar to Apocalypse Ora, the 1980 action drama Heaven's Gate spirals out of control. The film fell behind the program and passed the budget. The obsession of director Michael Cimino with period details and precision led to repeated reconstructions for the sets. Moreover, Cimino insisted on a number not necessary of rockets — once also waiting for a particular cloud to float in sight. Really? Photo Courtesy: United Artists/IMDb In the end, Cimino spent approximately $44 million on production costs, and the film only grossed $3.5 million at the box office. While he developed a cult following, he did not earn nearly enough money to justify the investment. Did Cimino learn the lesson? Cleopatra was always destined to be great. The 1963 romantic epic played Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, and the vast budget allowed the production crew to build elaborate sets. The film remains the most expensive film ever made — it almost failed 20th Century Fox. Photo Courtesy: 20th Century Fox/IMDb Director Joseph L. Mankiewicz replaced Rouben Mamoulian shortly after the start of the filming, and the production stopped when Taylor became seriously ill. Some of the elaborate sets have been unused. Taylor and Burton started an intense love affair that brought a lot of negative attention to the film. Despite all, the film is still considered as the most fascinating historical epic ever made. The 1967 musical fantasy Doctor Dolittle wasfrom the beginning. He had a difficult star (Rex Harrison), the terrible time to film, street animals, expensive requisitions and poorly chosen shooting sites. It was a disaster, and no one enjoyed working on the film, including includedLocal residents in Wiltshire Village of Castle Combe, United Kingdom. Photo courtesy: XX century Fox / IMDb Construction for the movie The annoyed residents, who had to remove their TV antennas from their homes because of the historical period of the movie. The movie cost more than $17 million and only cashed $6.2 million. The 1998 remake, starring comedian Eddie Murphy, went much better. Director William Friedkin is known for going "all out" for his movies. The exorcist director built a giant bridge over a river Dominican Republic for his 1977 Thriller wizard. When the riverbed dried up, Friedkin moved to Mexico, where he built another bridge over the Papaloapan River. This river also dried up before filming began. Photo Courtesy: Universal Pictures / IMDb Rivers WerenAe áe T The only drama. During filming, 50 crew members fell ill with malaria, food poisoning and gangrene. However, Friedkin does not give up. Everyone else doesn't enjoy working on the movie, but the director says he "wouldn't change a frame" of the movie. In the days before, the 1984 horror movie faced many complications. Director Joe Dante and his creative team have faced problems caused by dozens of creature effects movies. "We were inventing technology as we moved on, and we were deviating from the script as we discovered new aspects of Gremlin's characters", Dante explained. Photo courtesy: Warner Bros/IMDb added, "it really freaked out after a while. The studio wasn't particularly favorable." The process of filming the special effects has become so arduous that the scene where GIZMO is PELLÉD with Dart has been added to the film strictly to satisfy the crew. Director Elaine confesses: "I knew I was acting, but I didn't know anything about the movie." He admitted to having heard the 1987 adventure Ishtar was a "hunter-up." For one thing, shooting in the Sahara desert was a bad idea. May and his crew were afraid they would be kidnapped, trapped in drugs or caught in the middle of a civil war "if they survived the heat. Photo courtesy: Columbia Imagery/IMDb tensions grew between May and the cast. Sometimes the director shoots to take scenes more than 50 times. The movie costs $51 million and only cashed a third of its budget. The movie has Dustin Hoffman but not much of a cult following. May hasn't directed a movie since. The script for the 1992 science fiction thriller Thriller Alien 3 was repeatedly rewritten, even after the sets were built and production had already begun. Several directors worked on the project before David Fincher calmed down. Throughout the entire production process, Fincher was frustrated by Cast, crew and study. Courtesy photo: 20th century Fox / IMDb has had to repeatedly redesign different scenes and manufacturers then portray the film behind the back of the director. Finally he became so upset by the film he refused to be associated with it. He was happy to be done with the project, and we us You really blame him for feeling that way. Originally, Brad Pitt was to star in the 2006 science fiction drama The Fountain. The film concentrated around him, but then dropped the image due to screenplay disassess just weeks before production. Director Darren Aronofsky struggled to find a replacement actor — eventually they chose Hugh Jackman — and Warner Bros. turn off production. Photo Courtesy: Warner Bros./IMDb Two years later, Aronofsky returned to the project with a budget smaller than $35 million. From the beginning to the end, it took almost five years to get the film on the big screen. The result was a remarkable-looking movie that still cashed only $10 million in the box office. Trey Parker and Matt Stone's 2004 action satire of the War on Terror, Team America: World Police, was shot with puppets on a stage and turned into a demanding production. They produced the film with puppets that brought four people to work. Some shots were so complex that they took a whole day to film. Photo Courtesy: Paramount/IMDb Stone commented: "It was the worst time of my life. I don't want to see a puppet anymore." Stone and Parker promised they would never run another movie. To date, they kept their word on that forehad. If you think there can be no drama that produces an animation film, think again. The 2000 film The Emperor's New Groove had many problems. Originally titled Kingdom of the Sun, the film was to be marked by the recording artist Sting. However, his songs were left after a tepid response, and the original director (Roger Allers) left the project. Photo Courtesy: Walt Disney Studios/IMDb The new director Mark Dindal entered to save the project. The film's budget was revised, and Dindal had to work quickly to turn the film into a critical and financial success. Despite the hectic pace, Dindal managed, and the film grossed $169 million. After Universal's success with the 1999 fantasy The Mummy, director Mark Romanek created The Wolfman in 2010. Unfortunately, the film had some hairy problems. Four weeks after production, Romanek fired and Joe Johnston took command. He requested many ransoms, and a new screenwriter was led to change the end of the original script. courtesy photo: Universal Pictures/IMDb In addition, visual effects creators struggled to complete the final scenes of the film. The new editors were added to the production, and Danny Elfman's score was eliminated, only to be restored. Although the film cashed $139 million, it did not approach the success of The Mummy. The science fiction thriller of Marc Forster 2013 World War Z requested more extra than the average film. Many zombiesof the movie were reached by CGI, but hundreds more were real-life extras. A scene shot in Malta required 900 extra. The number of people on the set reached about 1,500 at one point. Photo courtesy: Paramount Pictures/IMDb The movie hit many many including the seizure of a huge cache of weapons by officials of a counter-terrorism unit. Many action scenes have been scratched at the last minute, and the end has been changed several times. The film cost $90 million, but it was a solid financial success at the cashier's office, cashing $540 million. Director George Miller spent 14 years of his life working on the science fiction fantasy of 2015 Mad Max: Fury Road. He insisted on filming with as many practical special effects as possible, and repeatedly crashed real cars for the action scenes of the film. Photo Courtesy: Warner Bros./IMDb In addition, the film started without an official script. Instead, Miller used hundreds of storyboards. When he finished filming, he had 400 hours of footage available. He must have taken a long time to change the film, but it was worth it. The film eventually won an Academy Award for Best Editing. Director Ridley Scott was excited to work on the film adaptation of Philip K. Dick Do Android Dream of Electric Sheep? However, he probably had no idea how difficult the science fiction fantasy of 1982 Blade Runner would become. He had a hectic relationship with the cast and the crew, leading to many heated debates. Photo Courtesy: Sunset Boulevard/Corbis/Getty Images Harrison Ford seemed bored most of the time on the set, and several collaborators described the film as "torture". The final blow was captured just as the producers arrived to pull the plug. The film did not take off at first, but became a favourite of worship over the years since its release. Manufacturers thought that the Disney Pirates of the Caribbean should not have been made. In 2002, Disney CEO Michael Eisner tried to pull the plug, not wanting another box office flop like The Country Bears. The actress Keira Knightley also had her doubts. When asked about his next project, he said: "It's a pirate thing - probably a disaster." Photo Courtesy: Walt Disney Studios/IMDb Producers despised Johnny Depp's "Keith Richardis" on Jack Sparrow. Eisner was sure he would ruin the movie. Despite all the negativity, the film has cashed more than $ 650 million to the world office of the box and has laid an adoring franchise. When comics expert Michael Usian began working for DC Comics, he had the vision to buy the rights for Batman and make a serious movie on the Caped Crusade. When he told Vice President Sol Harrison about his idea, Harrison warned him that the brand had died and left the project. Photo Courtesy: Warner Bros./IMDb No one supported it, so Usian started working without a script or crew. When actor Michael Keaton signed to star like Batman, fans havein more than 50,000 letters protesting. However, when the movie premiered in 1989, it grossed $411 million globally á and Keaton became the best Batman to date. It took some time to get to the Future on the ground. Robert Zemeckis and Bob Gale's 1985 science fiction fantasy was rejected by studios for Finally, famous director Steven Spielberg signed as producer, and the film found a house with Universal Pictures. Complimentary photo: Universal Pictures/IMDb Producers loved Michael J. Fox's idea as Marty McFly, but they weren't sure he could devote himself to the film because of his TV show, Family Ties. They originally launched Mask actor Eric Stoltz, but he was fired and Fox assumed the role. The film has cashed over $381 million worldwide and has generated a successful franchise. Star Wars is one of the biggest franchises of all time. The first film, released in 1977, had extensive special effects, causing the film to fall behind the program almost immediately. Sometimes it seemed like a hopeless attempt. Complimentary photo: Lucasfilm/IMDb George Lucas overcame the film's budget and was forced to divide his crew into three separate units to finish the film. Fox administrators were convinced that Star Wars would be a flop, but they were wrong — very, very wrong. Star Wars was a colossal success, and the rest is intergalactic history. It would be thought after James Cameron's experience of filming The Abyss that would avoid water-based films. Instead, he directed the historical drama of 1997 Titanic. The service didn't go very well, and crew members described Cameron as a "300-decibel screamer". In addition, actors have endured hours in cold water. Complimentary photo: Paramount Pictures/IMDb At some point, a crew member slammed lobster soup with a hallucinogenic drug, which sent Cameron and more than 50 people to the hospital. The budget was wiped out by the water, but it worked at the end. The film cashed over $2 billion and won the Academy Awards for Best Film and Best Director. Director Stanley Kubrick was determined to turn Stephen King's The Shining into a perfect film. The flick of the 1980 psychological horror was a long production. Kubrick ordered more footage, often shooting scenes more than 100 times. The famous scene of "Here's Johnny", which included Jack Torrance (Jack Nicholson) who forced an axe through a door, took three days to film and destroy more than 60 doors. Complimentary photo: Warner Brothers/Getty Images It was only 100 days to film the film, but the production lasted 250 days. Kubrick was reported so difficult to work with the hair of that actress Shelley Duvall began to fall, and suffered a nervous breakdown. Damn![!] There's never been a movie like the 1975 horror drama Jaws. The film went far beyond the budget due to mechanical problems with Bruce, the fake shark of the film. Crew members called the film Flaws. He only had to take 55 days to film the film, but he turned into 159 days. Photo Courtesy: Universal Pictures/IMDb Meanwhile, actors Richard Dreyfuss andShaw were in a feud bitter. He didn't help that the boat's boat had a rusty hull and really began to sink. Spielberg was sure his career was over, but the movie gross more than $ 100 million and became one more more movies never made. Got it.
