Reference - as a transparent and evolving global ESG standard against which companies can assess their progress and achievement. At each review some companies will exit and other will enter. This impacts share price and is a busy day of trading. Research - to identify environmentally and socially sustainable companies. The indexes described above are suitable for benchmarking purposes and can be used as tools in the creation of financial products, such as institutional and retail funds, exchange traded funds (ETFs) and derivatives. Research for the indices is supported by the Ethical Investment Research Services (EIRIS).[2] The index excludes companies due to their involvement in tobacco production, nuclear weapons, conventional weapon systems, or coal power industry and rates companies for inclusion based environmental sustainability, relationships with stakeholders, attitudes to human rights, supply chain labour standards and the countering of bribery.[3][4] It is uncertain whether inclusion in or exclusion from the index does effectively incentivise the affected companies to change their behaviour in regards to social responsibility.[5] As to the financial performance for investors, there is no evidence that a portfolio that is subject to ethical criteria performs significantly different compared to their unrestricted equivalent.[3] See also Calvert Social Index MSCI KLD 400 Social Index References ^ ethicalinvestment.co.uk, FTSE4Good Archived 2012-01-22 at the Wayback Machine ^ FTSE.com, EIRIS Archived 2011-01-10 at the Wayback Machine ^ a b Collison, D.
