

I'm not robot!

Sure. But I'm satisfied with the amount of attention we did get, and that was enough to me to care about the characters, which, to me, is what I love about Jung Eun Ji as Yeon Doo. What I love about Jung Eun Ji is her natural earthy, approachable and relatable quality. It's this same quality that she imbues Yeon Doo with, that makes Yeon Doo such a likable, believable character. She makes Yeon Doo feel real and honest as a character, and I think a large part of that has to do with her committed, no-vanity approach to the role. [MINOR SPOILER] In episode 3, I found the crying scene where she bawls in front of Yeol (Lee Won Geun) so believable. She ugly-cries without hesitation, and it totally feels like Yeon Doo's baring her soul, by just crying it out. [END MINOR SPOILER] In that moment, Yeon Doo had my heart completely; it's hard not to feel for a character who bares her soul with such an almost-reckless type of honesty and vulnerability. I appreciated that audacious sincerity in Yeon Doo all series long. It's true that later in the series, Yeon Doo's actions sometimes bordered on unbelievably saintly, but Jung Eun Ji's earthy delivery manages to keep it within the range of believability. Also, I appreciate the growth arc that writer-nim gives Yeon Doo, in making her less brash and more thoughtful over the course of the show. Yeon Doo's loyalty, resilience, compassion and empathy proves to be a transformative force in our drama world, and witnessing how Yeon Doo changes the people around her for the better, mostly just by being herself, was something that I enjoyed very much. 2. Lee Won Geun as Yeol Lee Won Geun does a nice job of portraying Yeol, who's all nonchalant smartypants on the outside, but all lonely wounded heart on the inside. What Lee Won Geun might lack in terms of depth in his delivery, he more than makes up for, with the multiple meaningful gazes and amused curled-lip smirks that Yeol wears throughout the show. That combination of languid satisfaction and pointed intent brought on many a squee moment, particularly in the first half of the show. Seriously. Who knew that almost-encounters in a high school drama could be this hot? Yeol starts out the show as quite the enigma, often flipping quickly between nice and not-so-nice. I found his smugness and lack of transparency a touch infuriating, but appreciated that writer-nim took pains to also give us glimpses of his better side. [SPOILER ALERT] An early example of this, is in episode 3 when Yeol manhandles Yeon Doo in the beginning of the episode in an attempt to force her to agree to join the cheerleading club. That did not sit well with me, at all. But then, later, he apologizes to her in the laundry room and then tells her the truth disguised as a lie, which gives her new perspective. He then gives her the space to come to her own conclusions. I liked this side of Yeol much better. I also really liked that later, when Yeon Doo's stuck outside the dorm after curfew, Yeol comes back to save Yeon Doo, but doesn't attempt to use it as leverage to get her to do what he wants. That said so much to me, about his integrity and character. I liked him a lot better after that. [END SPOILER] Overall, I genuinely enjoyed witnessing Yeol's growth arc. Over the course of the show, Yeol becomes more and more of an open, happy book, and seeing him relax into himself made me happy too. 3. Ji Soo as Ha Joon Augh, Ji Soo broke my heart with his character's pain in Angry Mom, and he totally outdid himself here. Ha Joon is a character who's aloof and prickly on the outside, but hurting deeply on the inside, and Ji Soo brings that angst to life quite compellingly. Sure, his delivery could've benefited from more dimension, but there were also distinct moments where he blew me away. Most importantly, he made me care about Ha Joon as a character. My heart totally went out to Ha Joon, and I desperately wanted him to be happy and pain-free. [SPOILER ALERT] One moment that sticks in my mind is the scene in episode 2, when Ha Joon attempts suicide and Dong Jae (Cha Hak Yun / N.) and Yeol find him in the shower stall, limp, unmoving and close to passing out. The glazed look in Ha Joon's eyes looked so real that I truly believed that he was about to lose consciousness, right there and then. Chills. [END SPOILER] Throughout the show, Ha Joon's brooding, wistful sadness tugged at my heartstrings. So Much. I just wanted to hug him and make all the bad things in his life go away. Because Ha Joon rarely had reason to smile, every time he did, my heart warmed for him. Seeing Puppy happy made me happy. Special Shout-Outs to: Yeon Doo's Mom I simply luff Yeon Doo's mom (Kim Yeo Jin). I love how warm, compassionate and loving she is, and I love that she's raised Yeon Doo to be just like her. Even though she's a secondary character, I perked up every time she showed up on my screen. I'm not sure that I've enjoyed a kdrama mom this much in a long time. [SPOILER ALERT] I freaking love the way Mom goes crazy defending Yeon Doo in the teacher's room in episode 2. She's so wholeheartedly behind her daughter, that it's clear for anyone to see, that her very passionate, very heated outburst stems from a fierce, unconditional love and loyalty. So fantastic, that Mom doesn't care if her daughter doesn't do well in school, as long as she learns good things and is treated right. [END SPOILER] Teacher Yang Kim Ji Suk is pitch perfect as the nonchalant and rather hapless Teacher Yang, who is so often caught between needing to toe the line and keep his head down, and wanting to do right by the kids. From starting the show as a rather isolated, almost throwaway sort of character, over time, Teacher Yang grows to form strong bonds with the kids, and his unwavering, selfless care for them is touching to witness. It's no wonder the kids grow to care about him as much as he cares about them. On a tangent, his not-a-love-in with Instructor Nam (Lee Mi Do) was a nice spot of amusement too. [SPOILER ALERT] I loved watching all the moments between Teacher Yang and each of the students individually. In particular, I found his connection with Yeon Doo adorable. My hands-down favorite Teacher Yang scene, though, has to be the one in episode 6, when Teacher Yang sits down to eat all by his lonesome self in the cafeteria because everyone is avoiding him for being a whistle-blower. I LOVE it when the kids - Real King and Baek Ho alike - all sit down with Teacher Yang and cheerily start to eat with him. It's a small moment, but so full of simple warmth. And it says so much, about what he means to them, and how they feel about him. Love.
