How to change formcontrol value in angular 6.

valueChanges is an Observable so you can pipe pairwise to get the previous and next values in the subscription. // No initial value. Will emit only after second character entered this.form.get('fieldName').valueChanges .pipe(pairwise()) .subscribe((prev, next); [any, any]) => ... ); // Fill buffer with initial value, and it will emit immediately on value change this.form.get('fieldName').valueChanges .pipe(startWith(null), pairwise()) .subscribe((prev, next); [any, any]) => ... ); Example of it working in StackBlitz: Update If you're noticing that startWith appears to be deprecated this is not the case. There is only a single active signature for the operator, which you can read about in this answer. Highly likely, you are using startWith(null) or startWith(undefiend), they are not deprecated despite the notice, but IDE detects a wrong function signature, which is deprecated, and shows the warning. A simple work around is providing the return type that would be expected: // Prevent deprecation notice when using 'startWith' since it has not been deprecated this.form.get('fieldName').valueChanges .pipe(startWith(null as string), pairwise()) .subscribe((prev, next); [any, any]) => ... ); Example of it working in StackBlitz with startWith: Reactive form instances like FormGroup and FormControl have a valueChanges method that returns an observable that emits the latest values. You can therefore subscribe to valueChanges to update instance variables or perform operations. Take a look at our intro to Reactive Forms if this is all new to you. Here we'll create a very simple example that updates a template string every time a value changes in the form. First, let's initialize our reactive form with FormBuilder: myForm: FormGroup; formattedMessage: string; constructor(private FormBuilder: FormBuilder) {} ngOnInit() { this.myForm = this FormBuilder.group({ name: "", email: "", message: "" }); this.onChanges(); } Notice how we call an onChanges method in the ngOnInit lifecycle hook after having initialized our form. Here's the content of our onChanges method: onChanges(): void { this.myForm.valueChanges.subscribe(val => { this.formattedMessage = `Hello, My name is ${val.name} and my email is ${val.email}. I would like to tell you that ${val.message}.`; }); } You can also listen for changes on specific form controls instead of the whole form group: onChanges(): void { this.myForm.get('name').valueChanges.subscribe(val => { this.formattedMessage = `My name is ${val}`; }); } Since valueChanges returns an observable, thy sky is pretty much the limit in terms of what you can do with the values that are emitted.
